A look to the future

Our overall aim is to help people across the UK to tackle their debts and manage their money with confidence. Our rolling annual plan focuses on how we will 'help more people, more effectively'.

We are achieving this by realising the benefits of the recent investment the Trust has made in technology, building in-house capabilities to improve the services that we offer and in doing so, becoming more cost effective. Over the next three years, we will continue to grow the number of people we serve both directly through our advice services and indirectly via our support to advisers in the sector through Wiseraadviser.

Our partnerships with the wider advice sector also enable us to move more clients to phone and online advice meaning we can support more people. This, together with the enhanced use of data will give us the evidence to better understand the indebted population and the causes and impact of debt, and demonstrate how we have successfully 'helped more people, more effectively'.

Impact Report

Our Impact Report is a summary of our statistics showing how we have helped more people, more effectively through the Trust's services.

Our values

Extensive work has been conducted involving our staff in developing our values. The outcome was three simple, but effective statements that describe our culture: Be Balanced; Be Supportive; Be Innovative. We are looking to recruit someone who reflects these values and who can help continue to embed these.

What our employees say

Scott, Business Debtline adviser

“The greatest compliment I have received from clients I have helped is them saying, “I have been able to sleep soundly again!” The job satisfaction and pride I have in my role is immeasurable. I’m proud that by the time clients have hung up they are clear on their next steps and to be part of an organisation that has a positive impact on individual lives, each and every call.”

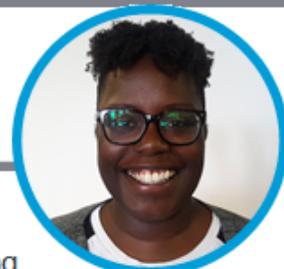

Dan, National Debtline adviser

“Before joining National Debtline I never realised how vulnerable people could be. But, I have also learned just how much people can be empowered to improve their situation. My favourite part of the job is when someone calls you believing there is no way out from their situation, then, over the course of the call you can feel their confidence increasing to the point where you know that going forward they are going to be able to take really positive, potentially life-changing steps.”

Deborah, quality assurance manager

“I have been at the Trust for over 20 years and seen many changes in the debt advice sector during this time. Ensuring quality has always been a central part of our work. Last year we built on our approach to ensure the needs of the individual remain at the forefront and we improved how we identify people in vulnerable circumstances. Advisers receive bespoke training to improve how they encourage disclosure from the people we help so that we can adapt our support to their needs. This includes breaking down advice into manageable chunks and arranging call backs.”

Regina, digital advice officer

“Having previously worked as an adviser I had a good understanding of debt advice clients. In our digital team we work hard to ensure that all of our website content covers what people need to know. Our user testing shows how people interact with our digital services and the feedback enables us to make changes that we know will benefit our clients.”

Communications Officer

Central London

Circa £30,000 p.a. dependent on experience plus pension

Are you excited about how PR and communications can be used to help people in difficulty, and bring about positive change?

For nearly three decades, the Money Advice Trust has been helping people across the UK to tackle their debts and manage their money with confidence. We run National Debtline, offering free, independent and confidential advice on personal debt over the phone and online, and Business Debtline, the UK's only free dedicated debt advice service for small business owners. We are also the leading training body for UK debt advisers, and provide a training and consultancy service for companies who engage with people in financial difficulty.

We use this frontline work to improve the UK's money and debt environment through our influencing strategy – working with government, regulators, creditors and partner charities to bring about changes to policy and practice. With debt problems currently high on the media, policy and political agenda, this is an exciting time to join this area of our work.

As a key member of the communications team, the Communications Officer will play a pivotal role in delivering this work – helping the charity to communicate our messages to journalists, politicians, civil servants and other stakeholders. The role will also lead on the delivery of the Trust's annual programme of events, and help to run our busy press office.

This is the perfect opportunity for someone looking to apply and further develop their skills across a broad range of PR and communications activity – including writing persuasive and engaging articles, press releases and blogs, developing creative social media content, organising and managing events, and planning and executing entire campaigns.
